Chertoff Admits Missteps

Senators scold DHS chief for botched response to Katrina

WASHINGTON | Acknowledging delayed aid and fumbled coordination, Homeland Security Secretary Michael Chertoff said Wednesday the federal response to Hurricane Katrina fell far short of providing immediate help to the Gulf Coast that could have saved lives.

Chertoff's Senate testimony came the same day a House panel released a scathing report concluding that deaths, damage and suffering could have been decreased if the White House and federal, state and local officials had responded more urgently to Katrina.

"There are many lapses that occurred, and I've certainly spent a lot of time personally, probably since last fall, thinking about things that might have been done differently," Chertoff told the Senate Homeland Security and Governmental Affairs Committee.

The House report — called "A Failure of Initiative" — found ample fault with state and local officials, including delays in ordering early evacuations in New Orleans. But it also criticized President Bush for failing to get more deeply involved as the crisis unfolded.

Chertoff promised the senators he would repair many of the shortfalls by the start of the 2006 hurricane season June 1.

Senators from both parties lectured Chertoff for his department's lackluster performance. Committee Chairwoman Sen. Susan Collins, R-Maine, said Homeland Security's response "must be judged a failure." She called it "late, uncertain and ineffective." (AP)

'I'm the Guy Who Pulled the Trigger'

Cheney takes blame for shooting, stands by lag in going public

WASHINGTON | Vice President Dick Cheney took the blame Wednesday for shooting a hunting companion, calling it "one of the worst days of my life," but he was defiantly unapologetic about not publicly disclosing the accident until the next day.

"You can't blame anybody else," Cheney told Fox News Channel in his first public comments since the accident on a private Texas ranch Saturday. "I'm the guy who pulled the trigger and shot my friend."

Cheney said he had had a beer at lunch that day, but law enforcement officials have ruled out alcohol as a factor.

The vice president has been under intense political pressure to speak out about the accident, which has become a public relations embarrassment and potential politi-

Guard Charged in Ill. Prison Escape

CHICAGO | Jail guard Darin Gater told investigators Wednesday he helped six detainees to escape. Gater said he was trying to influence an upcoming sheriff election.

Gater, 36, of Chicago appeared in court Wednesday by video but did not make a statement.

He was ordered held on $500,000 bond on two counts of aggravated battery of a corretional officer, aggravated arson, escape and official misconduct. All six inmates who escaped from the Cook County Jail last weekend have been captured.

The brother and sister of one of the escaped inmates, Francisco Romero, were also charged Wednesday. Anna Romero and Jose Romero each face four counts of aiding an escapee. (AP)

Rice Outlines Bush's Mideast Policy

Senate Republicans slam White House on Iraq, Iran and Hamas

WASHINGTON | The Bush administration will "walk a fine line" in seeking punitive international sanctions against Iran's Islamic government over its disputed nuclear program, Secretary of State Condoleezza Rice said Wednesday.

The Bush administration's top diplomat detailed a two-track approach to Iran — concerted international pressure to deter Tehran from building a bomb, and a newly robust attempt to seed democratic change inside the country.

Rice got a mixed reception from the Senate Foreign Relations Committee. She ran into tough questions from lawmakers of both parties about Iran, Iraq, the Palestinians and other issues.

"I don't see, Madame Secretary, how things are getting better. I think things are getting worse. I think they're getting worse in Iraq. I think they're getting worse in Iran," said Sen. Chuck Hagel, R-Neb. He was also pessimistic about the implications of the militant group Hamas' victory in Palestinian elections.

Rice faces tough questions before a Senate Committee on Wednesday.

On Iraq, the panel's top Democrat countered Rice's optimism about political unity among Iraq's squabbling ethnic groups.

"I'm not hopeful," Sen. Joseph Biden, D-Del., told Rice. "The policy seems not to be succeeding."

Rice gave the most detailed glimpse to date of U.S. options and objectives on Iran, now that the U.N. Security Council is set to consider the case against its nuclear effort. She called the country the single greatest challenge faced by the United States, because of its alleged nuclear ambitions and role as a terrorist patron state. ANNE GEARAN (AP)

Last month, 48 of the endangered animals are known to have died statewide, 12 more than in January 2005.

Half of the deaths were listed as cause unknown because the manatees' bodies were decomposed when they were retrieved, but officials are waiting on lab test to determine if toxic algae was involved. (AP)

U.S. says Australian broadcast of images could inflame violence

BAGHDAD, IRAQ | New images showing Iraqis abused by U.S. guards at Abu Ghraib prison three years ago threatened Wednesday to inflame public anger already running high over footage of British soldiers beating youths in southern Iraq.

Images of naked prisoners, some bloodied and lying on the floor, were taken about the same time as earlier photos that triggered a worldwide scandal and led to military trials and prison sentences for several lower-ranking American soldiers.

Many of the pictures broadcast Wednesday by Australia's Special Broadcasting Service, including some that appear to show corpses, were more graphic than those previously published. One of the video clips depicted a group of naked men with bags over their heads standing together and masturbating.

In the Middle East, where there have been widespread anti-Western protests recently over caricatures of the Prophet Muhammad, Al-

This image from Australian TV allegedly shows a hooded prisoner being threatened by a dog in Iraq's Abu Ghraib jail in 2003.

Jazeera and Al-Arabiya TV aired some of the Australian station's footage but refrained from using the most shocking and sexually explicit images.

Iraq's acting human rights minister, Nermine Othman, said she was "horrified" by the pictures and would study whether any action could be taken against those responsible, even though some offenders have been imprisoned.

Pentagon spokesman Bryan Whitman said the Defense Department believed the release of additional images of abuse was harmful and "could only further inflame and possibly incite unnecessary violence in the world."

The Australian station refused to say how it obtained the images, and their authenticity could not be verified independently. However, they were consistent with earlier photographs of abuse taken at Abu Ghraib. ROBERT H. REID (AP)

Europe Starts Tougher Bird Flu Precautions

GENEVA | European governments are bolstering their guard against bird flu, faced with a growing number of dead swans and the risk that migratory birds — which begin returning north next month — could bring the disease from Africa.

France, Germany, the Czech Republic, Switzerland and Sweden all took steps Wednesday to try to prevent the spread of the deadly H5N1 strain, ordering that domestic fowl be kept in screened, ventilated buildings, where they are less likely to come in contact with wild birds. Britain and the Netherlands have yet to record bird flu outbreaks, but ordered similar precautions.

Christianne Bruschke of the World Organization for Animal Health said the most likely birds

No Letup in Pakistan Cartoon Riots

Protesters torch businesses, clash with police; 3 people killed

PESHAWAR, PAKISTAN | Gunfire and rioting erupted Wednesday as tens of thousands of people took to the streets in Pakistan's third straight day of violent protests over the Prophet Muhammad cartoons. Three people were killed, including an 8-year-old boy.

The European Union condemned both the cartoons, first printed in a Danish newspaper in September, and what it called "systematic incitement to violence" against European diplomatic missions by some unidentified governments.

Pakistani intelligence officials have said members of outlawed Islamic militant groups have joined the protests, and may be inciting violence to undermine the government of President Gen. Pervez Musharraf.

German Hijackings Law Nixed

BERLIN | Germany's highest court Wednesday struck down a law that would have allowed the government to shoot down hijacked airliners as a last resort in a terrorist attack.

President Horst Koehler signed the air safety bill last year, but he encouraged a review by the Federal Constitutional Court amid heated debate over whether the state has a right to kill citizens even to save the lives of others. A complaint was filed by a group of lawyers and a flight captain.

In its ruling, the court found the bill "incompatible with the fundamental right to life and with the guarantee of human dignity" for innocent passengers on an aircraft.

The law was proposed by the government of former Chancellor Gerhard Schroeder in the wake of the Sept. 11, 2001, attacks. (AP)

Report Shows Traffic Is Worsening

Planning board says density on key roads has doubled since '02

WASHINGTON | A report documents what drivers already know: traffic in the Washington region has grown worse since 2002.

The report, released Wednesday, was done for the region's Transportation Planning Board and is based on 80,000 aerial photographs taken over four morning and evening rush hours. Two of the most changed areas are westbound Interstate 66 from Lee Highway to Sudley Road, and southbound I-95 from Dumfries Boulevard to Russell Road. Traffic density on both stretches of road doubled since 2002.

Ron Kirby, the board's director, called the increase dramatic, saying the biggest traffic changes should be addressed with road and transit improvements.

The study also found the rush hour is beginning earlier. Total lane miles of congestion increased 64 percent between 4:30 and 5:30 in the afternoon.

Kirby acknowledged the photos of backups on the Capital Beltway, I-395, I-95 and the Woodrow Wilson Bridge document known problems, but there were some surprises.

"The approach to the 14th Street Bridge in the evening was the second-worst congested," Kirby said.

The Capital Beltway near Connecticut Avenue sees some of the worst traffic.

That same section also ranked sixth in the morning on the areas

Resident Questioned In Suspicious D.C. Fire

Apartment building in Southwest has been scene of past incidents

WASHINGTON | Investigators were questioning a resident in connection with a fire Wednesday inside a Southwest D.C. apartment building where firefighters have been called numerous times before.

"It was definitely set," D.C. Fire spokesman Alan Etter said of the blaze in a second floor unit. Forty-nine units at the Capital Park Plaza Apartments were damaged.

Firefighters rescued several people, Etter said, adding that many residents are handicapped. Seven people were treated at the scene, but one — a 38-year-old man — had to be hospitalized with smoke inhalation. No firefighters were hurt.

In 2004 and 2005, a series of fires hit the Capital Park Plaza Apartments.

Etter said an arrest was made earlier in those cases. (AP)

Schaefer Under Fire for Ogling Aide

ANNAPOLIS, MD. | State Comptroller William Donald Schaefer reacted angrily Wednesday to questions about whether he may have offended an aide to Gov. Robert Ehrlich.

After the young woman brought him a beverage at a Wednesday morning meeting at the State House, Schaefer stared intently as she walked back to the governor's office. Then, just as she reached the door, he summoned her back as people waiting to testify before the board watched.

When the aide, looking puzzled, returned to the table, Schaefer told her, "Walk again," and watched her as she made the trip again.

When reporters asked him after the meeting about the incident, he called their interest "dumb." He said "this little girl" ought to be "happy that I observed her going out the door."

At one point after the meeting, the comptroller went into the governor's private office and returned to say the woman was embarrassed by the incident.

But Schaefer, 84, was unapologetic about his actions. (AP)

SHUT OUT: A federal appeals court has thrown out a lawsuit challenging Maryland Gov. Robert Ehrlich's order that banned state employees from speaking to two writers from the Baltimore Sun. #### Effort to Save Brewmaster's Castle Gets 30 More Days

A grassroots campaign to save a city landmark near Dupont Circle got a one-month reprieve Wednesday. Friends of the Castle, a group trying to raise money for the Brewmaster's Castle on New Hampshire Avenue, said a bank extended Wednesday's deadline for paying mortgage interest until March 15. The group has so far raised about $70,000 of the $250,000 it needs to pay off mortgage interest from a loan taken out in 2003 to keep the mansion from being converted into a private club. (AP)

Bernanke Makes His Debut on Hill

Queried on economy, new Fed chair sticks by Greenspan model

WASHINGTON | New Federal Reserve Chairman Ben Bernanke said Wednesday the economy is on track for good growth this year, sticking closely to predecessor Alan Greenspan's script.

In his debut congressional testimony as Fed chairman, Bernanke signaled that the central bank, which has raised interest rates 14 times since June 2004, stood ready to boost rates more if needed to combat inflation.

Investors and private economists, who had been apprehensive that Bernanke might sound a tougher line on inflation than Greenspan, said they detected no switch in policy from the Greenspan Fed.

"There were no big surprises. Bernanke kept very much to the promise he made at his confirmation hearing that he would maintain continuity with Greenspan" said David Jones, chief economist DMJ Advisors in Denver.

Fed chief Ben Bernanke signaled that more interest rate hikes were possible.

Bernanke said future rate hikes would depend on incoming economic data. But he said despite last year's surge in energy prices and hurricane devastation, recent figures showing strong employment growth and retail sales in January "suggests that the economic expansion remains on track." # Web Firms Challenged On China Censorship

WASHINGTON | Four U.S. high-tech companies on Wednesday found themselves branded collaborators with the Chinese government in suppressing dissent in return for access to a booming Internet market.

House members contended that Microsoft Corp., Yahoo Inc., Cisco Systems Inc. and Google Inc. sought to explain their business practices in China only after a recent crush of negative media and government attention.

"Your abhorrent actions in China are a disgrace," said Rep. Tom Lantos, the top Democrat on the House International Relations Committee. "I simply don't understand how your corporate leadership sleeps at night."

Yahoo's senior vice president and general counsel, Michael Callahan, said his company was "very distressed" at having to comply with Chinese law.

Analysts say U.S. high-tech companies trying to tap a market of more than 110 million Internet users also must worry about the perception they are helping China harass dissidents.

Microsoft's associate general counsel, Jack Krumholtz, said his company was committed to staying in China because of the Internet's potential for eventually allowing free access to information.

"We think the benefits far outweigh the downside, in terms of promoting freedom of expression," he said. FOSTER KLUG (AP)

Merrill Lynch, BlackRock to Merge

NEW YORK | Retail brokerage giant Merrill Lynch & Co. Inc. has agreed to combine its asset-management business with money manager BlackRock Inc. in exchange for a nearly 50 percent stake in BlackRock.

The transaction, announced Wednesday, would transform BlackRock into one of the world's top money managers, with an asset base of around $1 trillion.

The deal comes just weeks after Wall Street investment bank Morgan Stanley ended widely reported discussions for obtaining a stake in BlackRock. (AP)

Ever Been Flooded with Anxiety?

- Felt as if you were choking or short of breath?
- Felt your heart starting to pound for no reason?
- Felt afraid you might die?
- Started to shake or sweat without warning?

If you were afraid of another attack occurring and these came out of the blue, you may have had in the past, or currently suffer, from an anxiety disorder called Panic Disorder. NIMH is seeking volunteers over 18 years old, who are not taking any psychiatric medications, to participate in a brain imaging research study, and/or a physiological and genetic research study. The research is trying to better understand the biological systems of Panic Disorder.

THIS ACTUALLY HAPPENED: Texas Western players celebrate winning their historic NCAA championship in College Park. A new movie recounts their season.

Anger on the 'Glory Road'

Incidents at Texas A&M couldn't have occurred, school says

UMBRAGE | Officials at Texas A&M Commerce University want Walt Disney and the makers of "Glory Road" to apologize for inaccurately linking their school to some of the film's most racially charged scenes.

The film chronicles the Texas Western Miners, who won the 1966 NCAA title with the first all-black starting lineup in a championship game. "Glory Road" includes a "completely false" depiction of a game against East Texas State University, then the name of Texas A&M Commerce, A&M spokeswoman Lorraine Pace said.

In the movie, East Texas fans are shown throwing drinks and popcorn and yelling racial slurs at Texas Western (now the University of Texas at El Paso), during a regular season game. A scene after the game shows a vandalized hotel room, with slurs written on the walls.

It never happened, Pace said. According to UTEP athletic department archives, the Miners played the Lions in El Paso on Dec. 9, 1965.

"These events are completely fabricated and go beyond literary license and decency," A&M-Commerce President Keith McFarland said.

The university has asked Disney, producer Jerry Bruckheimer, director James Gartner and the screen-play writers to apologize.

Officials with Disney and Bruckheimer's film company weren't available for comment.

The complaint isn't the first. Supporters of former Kentucky coach Adolph Rupp have complained that the movie unfairly cast Rupp as a racist.

The Miners, coached by Don Haskins, beat Rupp's all-white Kentucky team in the championship game. The movie was adapted from Haskins' book about the season. ALICIA A. CALDWELL (AP)

The number of three-pointers Duke's J.J. Redick has made in his four-year college career after Tuesdays' win over Wake Forest. That breaks the previous record of 413, set by Virginia's Curtis Staples between 1994 and 1998.

Hedrick's Dream of 5 Golds Dashed

U.S. speedskaters are eliminated in team pursuit quarterfinals

SPEEDSKATING | One teammate didn't show up, another couldn't keep up. And not even Chad Hedrick could do it alone.

Already the owner of one gold medal, Hedrick was hoping to get started on another Wednesday in the two-day team pursuit. But the Americans were eliminated in the quarterfinals, dashing Hedrick's hope of matching Eric Heiden's record five gold medals in a Winter Olympics.

"The five medals isn't a big thing," Hedrick said. "The most important thing for me right now is to go out and have fun. Things could be a lot worse right now."

Shani Davis skipped the pursuit to concentrate on his individual races, leaving Hedrick as the strongest skater on the three-man team.

Italian team of Matteo Anesi, Stefano Donagrandi and Enrico Fabris by nearly a half-second after leading through the first four laps.

Boutiette couldn't keep up with his younger teammates, lagging about 10 feet behind when Leveille and Hedrick were first across the finish line.

The Italians crossed together, giving them the victory on home ice.

Weir Has A Line on The Silver

FIGURE SKATING | Johnny Weir can handle the men's gold medal going to Russia once again, particularly if he finds himself holding on to a shiny silver one.

The three-time U.S. champion and the rest of the men are chasing Evgeni Plushenko, and it looks like a futile pursuit. Plushenko carries more than a 10-point lead into Thursday night's free skate, and even though the new judging system is more accom-

ALESSANDRO TROVATI/AP COLD MOUNTAIN: Lindsey Kildow speeds past a gate during the women's downhill two days after surviving a scary crash.

Eighth Is Enough in Kildow's Return

American back on the slopes days after crash; Dorfmeister is golden

SKIING | Michaela Dorfmeister waited eight years to erase one one-hundredth of a second. Lindsey Kildow waited all of 48 hours to race past her frightening fall.

Bookending the women's Olympic downhill Wednesday, the ready-to-retire Dorfmeister finally discarded the disappointment of a near-miss by winning her first Winter Games gold. And the up-and-coming Kildow showed serious guts simply by skiing at all.

"I wanted to get a medal," said Kildow, who tied for eighth, "but I still have more chances — so don't give up on me yet."

Who would at this point?

After all, the mere idea of Kildow hurtling down a mountain again at 50 mph within the next few months, let alone at these Olympics, seemed far-fetched to anyone who saw her body-battering crash in Monday's practice on the same hill.

As the 21-year-old American put it: "It's definitely weird going from the hospital bed to the start gate."

Yet there she was, setting out on a smooth if slightly tentative run, despite feeling plenty of pain and being "maybe about 70 percent" fit.

Cloud cover made visibility tough, yet Kildow was well aware of where she had lost control, done an awkward leg split and flown 15 feet before slamming to earth.

"I was a little nervous, I'm not going to lie," Kildow said. "I was definitely out of my tuck and just making it past that point and then once I got past that point, I was pretty relieved." HOWARD FENDRICH (AP)

GOLD STANDARDS

→ Wang Meng gave China an expected gold medal in women's 500-meter short track Wednesday night, holding off Bulgaria's Evgenia Radanova by about the length of a skate blade. Anouk LeBlanc-Boucher of Canada took the bronze.

OTHER DEVELOPMENTS

→ Seeking the one medal that has eluded them, Mark Grimmette and Brian Martin wrecked on their first run in the double's luge Wednesday, ending perhaps the final chase for the most decorated doubles luge team in U.S. history. Austrian brothers Andreas and Wolfgang Linger won the gold, finishing the two-run event in 1 minute, 34.497 seconds.

→ Italy shocked the United States and rocked the Olympic curling venue on Wednesday night, earning a 6-5 victory in the men's opening round.

→ The American women's curling team earned its first victory of the Olympics, beating Denmark 8-3 on Wednesday to avoid a fourth consecutive defeat.

→ The Nordic combined will resume Thursday after the ski jumping portion was halted because of wind.

Jeremy Bloom's skiing career likely came to an end on Wednesday, when he finished sixth in the moguls. Australia's Dale Begg-Smith won the gold medal.

American Bloom Punts in Moguls

Two-sport athlete places 6th; Dawson gives U.S. a bronze

SKIING | A bobble through the bumps and a small splash of snow hit Jeremy Bloom harder than any linebacker could. Might have made him wish he'd stuck to football, too.

Bloom's skiing adventure came to a less-than-satisfying close Wednesday. The two-sport star finished sixth in Olympic moguls and felt compelled to smile through it all, even though the ending wasn't the one everyone expected.

"It really isn't about winning the medal for me," Bloom insisted.

That honor went to fellow

American Toby Dawson, who capped off four years of single-minded toil to finish third. Mikko Ronkainen of Finland won silver and Dale Begg-Smith of Australia added to his recent dominance by taking the gold.

Bloom has bigger things on his radar now — starting with a trip to the NFL scouting combine next week — and wallowing in disappointment isn't part of that.

"This may be my last mogul competition and if so, I'll look back on it with a huge smile on my face," he said. "I've had more success in this sport than I ever dreamed possible. It's just been an amazing ride and I don't think a medal here would have affected that at all." EDDIE PELLS (AP)

Ohno Advances to Finals in 2 Events

SHORT TRACK | Apolo Anton Ohno led the Americans into the finals of the 5,000-meter relay and advanced in the 1,000 on Wednesday night, avoiding the sort of trouble that knocked him out of his first Olympic short track event.

Ohno and his teammates — Rusty Smith, J.P. Kepka and Alex Izykowski — beat China to win their semifinal relay race. The final is held Feb. 25.

Skating on his own, Ohno did just fine, too. He moved on to Saturday's quarterfinals in the 1,000 with a comfortable victory in this preliminary heat. (AP)

Tie Feels Like Loss to U.S.

Americans off to slow start in hockey after 3-3 draw with Latvia

HOCKEY | With a full roster of NHL players, it took a late goal by Jordan Leopold to salvage a 3-3 tie against Latvia in an opening game for the U.S. hockey team that felt more like a loss.

When the final horn sounded, the Latvian players raised their arms in triumph while the Americans slowly gathered around goalie John Grahame.

Goalie John Grahame lies in the net after surrendering a goal to Latvia Wednesday.

NHL players, rallied from an early two-goal deficit and proved U.S. coach Peter Laviolette had every reason to be worried about this opening matchup in Olympic Group B.

Latvia had the luxury of playing mostly as a team in recent weeks, while the U.S. squad was scattered around North America. Due to the record snowfall on the East coast of the U.S. this past weekend, only two American players were in Italy by Monday and the team had just one practice before hitting the ice Wednesday night.

Latvia is coming off a ninth-place finish in 2002, when the Americans earned a silver medal at Salt Lake City, losing to Canada in the final. IRA PODELL (AP)

Eventually, Canadians Rout Italy

HOCKEY | Jarome Iginla started these Olympics the same way he ended them in Salt Lake City—with two goals—and gold medal favorite Canada survived a brief scare with a dominating second period in a 7-2 rout of Italy in its tournament opener Wednesday.

With troubled team executive Wayne Gretzky looking on nervously from a private box high in the grandstands, Canada was locked in a surprising 1-all tie early in the second period. Or right about the time the soon-to-be-overwhelmed Italians realized who they were playing.

Canada, using its overwhelming speed and stickhandling ability to create dozens of scoring chances in the second period alone, scored five consecutive goals in a span of 13 1/2 minutes to turn the unexpectedly close game into the anticipated rout. (AP)

Ovechkin Scores, But Russians Lose

HOCKEY | Marian Gaborik beat two defenders on a rush out of his own zone with 3 1/2 minutes remaining, and Slovakia pulled off the first upset of the Olympic hockey tournament by beating Russia 5-3 Wednesday.

Gaborik raced down the right wing boards, broke toward the net and beat goalie Ilya Bryzgalov with a wrist shot that flew inside the far post. Then, to seal one of the biggest wins in his country's history, Gaborik scored again in nearly identical fashion with 29 seconds left.

Capitals rookie Alex Ovechkin scored for Russia. (AP)

The End of an Era for GW's Swimming Team

Moss prepares to close out a stellar career for Colonials at A-10 meet

COLLEGE SWIMMING | Maggie Moss has spent the last four years seemingly walking on water — or at least gliding through it on her back.

Throughout her career, Moss has been one of the best swimmers on the George Washington women's team. She has set school records, broken her own records, won plenty of races and helped motivate her teammates. But Saturday will most likely be the last time the team's captain — who coach Dan Rhinehart calls a nearly perfect athlete — swims for the Colonials. "I'm not quite mentally ready for it," Moss said.

Originally, Moss was one of the favorites in the 100- and 200 backstroke at this weekend's Atlantic-10 Championships in Buffalo, N.Y. But a chronic shoulder injury and a bicep tendon might sideline Moss for the meet — or at least severely hamper her chances.

Moss

With all that looming, the 22-year-old somehow stays happy and upbeat, something Rhinehart has always liked about his star swimmer.

Moss says she's excited to experience normal college things like sleeping in (the team practices five days a week at 6 a.m.) and going to happy hour, and she's hoping to someday get her Ph.D in 20th century American literature.

"She's a tough kid to lose," Rhinehart said. IAN HERBERT

Hoyas Head On the Road

Georgetown tries to rebound from W.Va. loss against Marquette

HOYAS HOOPS | With only five games left in the regular season, the Hoyas are still sitting pretty — even in the midst of one of their toughest stretches of the season. And after Sunday's loss to No. 9 West Virginia, the team says their confidence hasn't been shaken at all.

"We've been playing well all season. We still played as a team, we just didn't win," guard Darrel Owens said. "We just have to continue to play hard. The guys we have on this team, we can get it done."

But getting it done will have to come Thursdays on the road, where the Hoyas (17-5) have played in only two of their last eight games. And Marquette loves to play host, as they've rolled to 11-2 at home.

"We're going into a very difficult venue to play in against a team that plays extremely well at home," coach John Thompson III said. "It's going to be a very difficult contest."

Georgetown would do well not to let their No. 17 ranking go to their head — a point Thompson has repeatedly emphasized. Marquette (16-8) isn't exactly a pushover, and the fearsome threesome of Steve Marquette's Steve Novak's 3-point shooting ability poses a threat to the Hoyas.

Novak, Dominic James and Jerel McNeal matches up well with Georgetown's key trio of Brendan Bowman, Jeff Green and Roy Hibbert.

One thing Marquette — one of the Big East's best three-point shooting teams — is looking to give them is a heavy dose of perimeter shots.

"You worry about it, because they're so good at it. At the same time, our guys have to understand that they're going to make threes," Thompson said. "You try to limit the number that they'll get. You hope they have an off-night."

One of the country's symbols finally set to go off endangered list

The proud symbol of a nation for more than two centuries, the iconic and elegant American bald eagle also is emblematic of a snail-paced federal bureaucracy.

Seven years after the government said the fierce raptor is no longer threatened with extinction, officials finally have a plan for removing it from the endangered species list.

"It just fell through the cracks," said Jamie Rappaport Clark, executive vice president of Defenders of Wildlife, who proposed delisting the bird in 1999 while she was President Clinton's Fish and Wildlife Service director.

The process has taken far longer than the typical year, partly because updated counts are required from each of the states, and some of those have rules that add red tape.

Clark called the bald eagle "a success story" for the embattled Endangered Species Act, which Republicans in Congress and the Bush administration have been pushing to reshape so that more responsibility is given to private landowners instead of the federal government.

"You can't deny the incredible success of the return of the bald eagle," she said. "A lot of attention, energy and money was put into its recovery."

The bird has battled back from the threat of extinction because of habitat loss and the pesticide DDT.

The Interior Department's Fish and Wildlife Service issued draft voluntary guidelines spelling out how landowners, land managers and others should protect the bird once the 1973 law no longer safeguards it.

It also proposed prohibitions on "disturbing" the bald eagle, which could include anything that would disrupt its breeding, feeding or sheltering or cause injury, death or nest abandonment.

Officials said the action earlier this week could lead to the bald eagle coming off the endangered species list within the next year or so.

"Should the eagle be delisted, we expect that the public will notice little change in how eagles are managed and protected," said H. Dale Hall, the Fish and Wildlife Service's director.

Hall said at least 7,066 known nesting pairs now exist in the contiguous United States. The bald eagle's territory stretches over much of the North American continent. Tens of thousands more live in Alaska and Canada, where their existence never was imperiled.

However, 43 years ago, there were just 417 known nesting pairs left in the lower 48 states, mainly because of the widespread use of DDT and other pesticides that weakened the bald eagle's eggshells and reduced its birth rate. The brown-bodied bird with the distinctive white head and tail also suffered from lead poisoning — eating waterfowl pierced by a hunter's lead shot.

By 1995, the species had rebounded enough to be reclassified as threatened throughout the lower 48.

David Smith, the Interior Department's deputy assistant secretary for fish and wildlife, said the agency wouldn't hesitate to act "if at any time in the future it becomes evident that the eagle needs relisting for protections." JOHN HEILPRIN (AP)

ORIGINS uses floral extracts in their FLOWER FUSION HYDRATING LIP COLOR ($15, origins.com). Flower wax allows the lipstick to also act as a balm, protecting and healing chapped lips. There's a vaguely waxy scent to the lipstick, though, making testers taste a bit crayon-y.

STILA's new PETAL ESSENCE line brings flowers to your face. The cleanser, available in April, smells of cucumber; the moisturizer ($30) smells spicy-sweet. The grapefruity retextrurizing scrub ($22) is friendly to sensitive skin. The sunscreen ($24, all at Sephora) smells pretty neutral, with just a hint of Play-Doh. It takes some rubbing, but vanishes nicely into skin.

Petal Pushing

Your Valentine's roses may be starting to whither a bit — and goodness knows there aren't any blooms outside to brighten your day — so you're looking for a little flower power in your life. Cosmetic companies are on it, introducing skincare and makeup that rely on flowers and their essences for health, anti-aging or just their make-you-pretty power. KRISTEN PAGE-KIRBY (EXPRESS)

Fad

AVEDA'S PETAL ESSENCE line also uses flower waxes, although in products meant for all over your face. The eye and cheek colors are smooth and long-lasting; the lip colors still have tingly infusion of mint. (Cheek tint, $14, lip glaze, $15, lip color, $14, aveda.com) The entire line is talc- and mineral-oil free.

GUERLAIN'S ORCHIDÉE IMPÉRIALE uses a molecular complex, found in orchids, that ensures the membranes of the long-living flowers' cells don't deteriorate. That same molecular complex can now be applied to your face for anti-aging benefits. This dream of a cream is intensely moisturizing, but some testers found the strong floral scent overpowering. Because, sometimes, access is everything. K.P.K.

Alcohol

Get Chicks Lit

Whining is something both sexes do. But wine has traditionally been a man thing, according to people in the grape world who have apparently never been to a cocktail party. So they've been rolling out labels like Mad Housewife, Seduction and Working Girl to appeal to the fairer sex. The latest woman wine is LULU B. (see boissetamerica.com for buying info), a French import available in Syrah, Chardonnay and Pinot Noir. It's more about a gimmicky label (with a sexy beret-wearing lady) than the taste, which is fairly standard for a $10 bottle — nothing to swoon over, but entirely inoffensive and fruity. And it's a cinch to open with its screw-top cap. VICKY HALLETT (EXPRESS)

'Meth Epidemic'

Filmmaker CARL BYKER was online Wednesday to discuss the PBS "Frontline" documentary "The Meth Epidemic," which examines the spread of the drug across the U.S. and its devastating consequences. | washingtonpost.com/liveonline

Is there a "profile" (i.e., gender, race, level of education) of the habitual meth user/addict?

Interestingly enough, no. Though lots of people have made generalizations based on the thought that many users appear to be poor white people, with a higher percentage of women, the reality is that meth has been "flying so much under the radar" that no well-respected studies have been done — but with all the focus now, hopefully that will change.

I was amazed, looking at the police photos over time, at the meth addicts who had been arrested and the major changes in their physical appearances. Is it the drug that does causes the physical changes or is it the impact on life style caused by the drug, or both?

It's both — perhaps the most fascinating thing is the wounds to the face. The addicts have actually done that to themselves with their own fingernails through a process that meth users call "picking." Because meth (as a kind of super Sudafed) dries out the skin so dramatically, the skin of addicts begins to itch really intensely and in their paranoid state they begin to think that they are covered with what they call "meth lice." And so, many addicts spend hours scratching/picking at what they think are lice on their face and in the process inflict those wounds on themselves.

From your experiences in creating this film, what is your opinion about the link between crime and the use of meth?

The correlation to crime is -- the cops we talked to suggested -- driven by the nature of the meth high. As one cop said to us: if you're using cocaine, you're high for two hours and then you have to begin looking for your next fix. With meth, one puff can keep you high for 24 hours and that turns people who are supporting themselves through crime into a kind of "super-criminal."

Is there a movement in place to educate kids in school?

Yes, there are definitely programs out there to educate kids, some using the same photos of meth users that you saw in the show.

Stick to Education, Colleges

I WASN'T THE LEAST bit surprised to read Tuesday's letter [blasting some universities for banning plays such as Eve Ensler's "The Vagina Monologues"]. There are many reasons why Americans are falling further and further behind other countries in education, and this is one of them. Many universities seem to have political agendas to promote and a special brand of "academic freedom," and one wonders if their focus is no longer on to want to take some advice that a friend or loved one gave you some time ago. Finally, your time has come.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Focus on quality, and you may discover that it is necessary to sacrifice a little quantity to improve things as you would wish.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Someone may try to hold you to an agreement that is not only invalid, but also entirely out of date. Now is the time to strike a new bargain.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) The truth will come out—and something will be revealed which will make a world of difference to you and those you love. Be prepared.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21) You may be risking something important to you, but in the end the risk can be well worth it, given the possible rewards.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21) You may have to tell somebody close to you one thing while telling someone else another thing altogether. Don't be deceitful.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) You're likely to get just what you deserve—whether it's really what you desire or not. Now you'll find out just what others really think.

Horoscope

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) A little luck and some careful timing can make things work out just perfectly, despite the difficulties that others are encountering.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20) This is a good day for making decisions about house and home—but only in close cooperation with a spouse or other loved one.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) This is a good day to make a unusual promise—but why not go out on a limb? You and a friend can both feel special by day's end.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) You may not enjoy what lies ahead as much as expected, but if you feel free to improvise you're likely to improve your chances for satisfaction.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) You won't be able to accomplish the big things entirely on your own, but help should be readily available. Be sure to ask for it.

Gay Cowboys: Coming Out of the Woodwork

WILLIE NELSON sang "Mamas Don't Let Your Babies Grow Up to Be Cowboys" more than 25 years ago. He released a very different cowboy anthem on Valentine's Day. "Cowboys Are Frequently, Secretly (Fond of Each Other)" may be the first gay cowboy song by a major recording artist. But it was written long before "Brokeback Mountain" made gay cowboys cool. Available exclusively through iTunes, the song features Nelson's deadpan delivery of lines like, "What did you think all them saddles and boots was about?" and "Inside every cowboy there's a lady who'd love to slip out." The song was written by singer-songwriter Ned Sublette in 1981. Sublette said he wrote it during the "Urban Cowboy" craze. (AP)

NAME: Sarah Vowell
GIG: "This American Life" essayist, author of "Assassination Vacation"

WHINY-VOICED and keen-eyed, Sarah Vowell has insinuated herself into the cultural conversation, popping up in the most unexpected places. She has filled in for Maureen Dowd as a guest columnist at The New York Times and she has voice-acted invisible teen Violet in "The Incredibles." Although she once wrote for the "New Art Examiner" and "Artforum," her latest book, "Assassination Vacation" — a brainy tourist's view of the Lincoln, Garfield and McKinley killings — looks at no art more contemporary than the Lincoln Memorial. Thursday at Lisner, she reads from it and other writings, signs copies and does a Q&A.

It's often difficult to think of living, breathing politicians as actual people. You do a great job of humanizing even the dead ones.

Oh, thanks. The thing is, I see everyone that way, even the living ones. Everyone just seems like a person to me. Sometimes it's harder, especially with the dead ones, to try and get to know them. Garfield was a true challenge.

Stylistically, it seems that for you the trick is to turn musty history back into living popular culture.

That's one result of changed times ... even in my lifetime, things have opened up. It's hard to remember the time when World War II veterans would never talk about World War II, because, of course, now they won't shut up about it — which is fine.

Part of the challenge, I think, of writing about history is going back and using primary and secondary sources from a time when no one said what was really going on, because of morals or religion or what-would-the-neighbors-think.

BENNETT MILLER

VOWELL SOUNDS OFF: The NPR commentator took a death-trip through history.

Does the presidency have sort of a Groucho problem, where we wouldn't want anyone in the office who would have the job? One of the things that is so appealing about your portrayal of Garfield is that he didn't really seem to want it.

That's true. That's one reason why I say the presidents and their assassins are a lot alike, just in that egomania.

Why no JFK?

I'm not interested in him, for starters ... The other thing is he hasn't really been dead that long. His family, his daughter's still alive,

"Presidents and their assassins are a lot alike, just in that egomania."

his brother's still alive. There's not enough distance to be as truthful about him. I don't really think he was that great of a president. I thought he was kind of wishy-washy on civil rights. It seems crass when you say that about someone who's been murdered, so I don't really need to be that person.

Will there be an "Incredibles 2"?

Well, I would do that if basically the same team did it, sure. But no. I loved working on that, but I have a job. GLENN DIXON

Girls Together Outrageously

The Veronicas don't rock, but they do make perky, confusing pop

MUSIC | Just when you thought it was safe to go back to the radio, when the scourge of sassy popettes sneering prettily and singing along to "rock" guitars was fading, just when Avril got over the damn tie, along come the Veronicas.

And how do we know these 20-year-old identical twins from Brisbane are more of the same? Well, the tie, for one thing. But the surefire giveaway that kohl-smeared teen dreams Jess and Lisa Origliasso — playing to a crowd of what we fervently hope isn't old men at the 9:30 on Saturday — fancy themselves marketable rock chicks? Rubber bracelets.

SUCH DEVOTED SISTERS: Jess and Lisa — or is it Lisa and Jess? — rock the tie.

Sigh. We have no idea when calling pop music pop music became a crime. The Veronicas' first single from "The Secret Life of the Veronicas," "4 Ever," bounces along with an appealing melody and rah-rah chorus, the stuff really great slumber-party sleepovers are made of. The hardcore posing only diminishes the song's candy-shell impact. Even more confusing, a totally inappropriate tie-in with another raven-haired Veronica — she of the Archie comics — aims the twins at the 8-to-12-year-old crowd. And should they really be singing along to "Let me show you all the things that we can do"?

But we're just old and cranky — no doubt tweens are inured to music videos in which twin hotties offer unlimited sexual favors to the camera and, it appears, each other. Whether you want to strap on the rubber bracelets and pay to see that happen is another question.

HARDCORE, SOFT MIDDLE: Since co-inventing the melodic metal style known as the "Gothenburg sound," In Flames has been winning over American metal fans.

Death Be

The Swedish band
In Flames finds the melody in death metal

MUSIC | If you missed death-metal band In Flames at Ozzfest 2005, better hurry to get a ticket for Thursday at the 9:30 Club. "The shows on this tour are selling out almost every night," said vocalist Anders Friden.

Perhaps the Swedish quintet is finally getting some recognition in America. In the mid-to-late '90s, In Flames, along with At the Gates and Dark Tranquility, pioneered a melodic Scandinavian metal style called the "Gothenburg sound" — a combination of twin guitars, thrash riffs and raspy vocals. The influence of In Flames and other Gothenburgers can be heard in American bands such as Shadows Fall and Killswitch Engage.

In Flames' current tour coincides with the release of the band's eighth studio album, "Come Clarity." The album finds In Flames balancing the band's recent penchant for catchy choruses with its classic guitar harmonies.

A unique moment in metal comes during the vocal duet on "Dead End" between Friden and Lisa Miskovsky — possibly the only person to have appeared on a death metal album and have written a single for the Backstreet Boys.

"There was a relaxed atmosphere when she came into the studio," said Friden, "and my voice and her voice work well together, even though I'm screaming and she's singing."

And what they're screaming about is original, too. Though many metal bands sing about dark fantasy worlds, Friden said: "I can't write about dragons or aliens ... I've never met any." GREGORY RE

'Visible Proofs' looks through centuries of forensic fascination

MUSEUMS | "CSI," "Grey's Anatomy," "Bodies" — as we wait to take a sneak peek at the National Library of Medicine's "Visible Proofs" exhibit, conversation turns to the TV shows that have invested in — and profited from — making the body visible.

And no wonder — every viewer has become an armchair coroner, well-enough versed in blood-spatter patterns, DNA analysis and entomology. If there's one thing popular culture's take on forensics has taught us, it's that the medical examiner is not willing to pin down the exact time of death, dammit.

So how much have we really learned? According to this exquisitely presented, thoughtfully curated show, subtitled "Forensic Views of the Body," a whole lot more than we knew 20 years ago, and we'll know a lot more soon.

Put together by NLM curator Michael Sappol, author of "A Traffic of Dead Bodies: Anatomy and Embodied Social Identity in 19th-Century America," the show's information base is necessarily wide and shallow, encompassing finger-print and DNA technology, toxicology, crime-scene analysis, advances in illustrative techniques and the uses of forensics from identifying the Unknown Soldier to exhuming the mass graves left behind after atrocities and freeing innocent convicts.

And, of course, there's lots of cool gross stuff on display.

"There's the rubbernecking phenomenon," said Sappol. "You don't want to look, but you can't stop looking. And we take full advantage of that."

Granted, you don't have to press the button that sets into motion a videotape of an actual autopsy from the 1970s (it's used as a teaching tool and viewer discretion is strongly advised), but there's something universally fascinating about seeing some of the tools used in Abraham Lincoln's autopsy or a preserved kidney split open to show a bullet's path, or even a jar of maggots taken from a murder victim's body.

But the exhibit is as sensitive and humanistic as it is frank in its depiction of human cruelty. It celebrates the men and women whose dedication to listening to the silently speaking body and to avenge its death progressed the art and science of forensics by mind-boggling leaps over the centuries.

"One theme of this show is the crazy things that people do with the human body — both to kill them, and to study them," said Sappol, as we watch a tape of a leg bone encased in gelatin endure a gunshot — the gelatin traps the bone fragments, ensuring generations of pathologists understand what various guns do to various bones.

You don't see that on "CSI."

Keeping a Scene Alive

Los Hermanos Rodriguez bassist launches local label

OUT & ABOUT | D.C. native Dave Ridgeway has gathered a diverse group of musicians under the umbrella of his new label, District Records. D.R.'s debut — a compilation featuring rock that's alternately dreamy (the Fallen One), garagey (Los Hermanos Rodriguez, the Nuclears, Lust & Envy), Southern (Circle 9) and funky (Trip Lizard) — drops Saturday. The D.R. crew will celebrate with an epic show at Chief Ike's, where Ridgeway's booked these bands for years.

When did you begin thinking about a label?

I started a thing called Local 221 to organize musicians. Let's say L.H.R. was playing: All the members would come out and instantly you'd have 40 people. This went on for about a year. I wanted Kim Coletta [Jawbox, Desoto Records] to talk about starting a label. I met with her and she said, "You're already running a label, you're just not going about it quite right." She was very encouraging.

How did you meet the bands on District Records?

For the most part I played with them with L.H.R. and we'd formed relationships. I have a knack for booking shows; I'd book three bands here, three bands there. I ended up booking these bands and they saw what I could do. Some of them sent me demos in the mail.

The Nuclears sound really young.

I think one of them's 21; the youngest is 17. You know, those guys won a battle of the bands at the Black Cat. They competed against L.H.R. and several other big bands. And then, because Mike was 15 or 16 at the time and it was a 21-plus contest; they had the title taken away.

So how's the D.C. scene?

You're always going to hear, "Oh, the scene's dead, long live the scene." The scene hasn't died. It's thriving. There are all types of things going on musically. TIM FOLLOS (EXPRESS)

Washington's Man About Town

George Pelecanos of 'D.C. Noir' knows all of the city's hoods

PAGES | It was only a matter of time before Akashic Books' series of city-specific crime-fiction anthologies stopped in Washington. Publisher Johnny Temple, also known for his bass playing in Girls Against Boys and New Wet Kojak, grew up in Shepherd Park. When recruiting an editor for "D.C. Noir," he went straight to the top. Nobody crafts a tale of streetlife desperation like George Pelecanos.

On Thursday, Pelecanos is joined by fellow "D.C. Noir" contributors James Grady and Jennifer Howard for a reading at Borders in Silver Spring.

Penning novels such as "Drama City," "Hard Revolution" and "King Suckerman," Pelecanos is known for shunning official Washington. In his story, "The Confidential Informant," the Capitol is just a building with streets named after it. But Pelecanos strove to have the collection "cover every base in the city." Hence Grady's nail-biter about a senatorial aide caught behind the 8-ball and Howard's portrait of a gentrifier who's scared when she shouldn't be and even more scared when she should be.

"Even though I'm always quick to point out that Washington is not the Federal City — it's only a small part of our city," Pelecanos said, "it's still a part of the city. To leave it out or to leave out a story about a white woman's fears living on Capitol Hill would be false, too. It's not just the things that I write about that make up this city."

Pelecanos may be wedded to D.C., but he's got a steady thing going with Baltimore. Still a writer for HBO's celebrated crime series "The Wire," he has relinquished his producer title. "You know, a lot of producing is sitting in a stupid chair with your name on it," he said, "watching other people work. That's not me. I would rather be home actually producing something — on paper." GLENN DIXON

Lundy's Jazz of Today

Classics are fine, but Carmen Lundy has got new songs to sing

MUSIC | Carmen Lundy is not content to be your average jazz diva. Instead of just lending her dark, chocolately alto to established classics, she'd rather sing her own songs. That's a risky gambit, considering the jazz world's fondness for yesteryear.

She doesn't completely skirt away from standards, but it's on her compelling originals such as "In Love Again" and "Good Morning Kiss" that she proves most persuasive. Her hands-on approach to her material, from lyric writing to arranging, places her more in the company of other courageous female jazz singers such as Betty Carter, Abbey Lincoln and Cassandra Wilson.

COURTESY AFRASIA

Also similar to those artists, Lundy's commitment to her own songwriting hasn't afforded her with instant stardom. She's been in the game for more than 30 years, asserting herself as a renaissance artist (songwriter, actress and painter). Nevertheless, Lundy has staying power.

Her discography is only seven albums deep and none of them are on major record labels. It's their loss, because her enthralling, self-released two-disc effort, "Jazz and the New Songbook: Live at the Madrid" (Afrasia Productions) shows just how commanding and captivating she is as she fronts a large ensemble composed of jazz luminaries such as alto saxophonist Bobby Watson, trombonist Steve Turre, pianist Billy Childs and her upright bass-playing brother Curtis Lundy, among others.

With any luck, she'll bring this all-star entourage to the Kennedy Center this Saturday, mapping out her artistic trajectory away from Easy Street. JOHN MURPH

A Hippie Classic's Fall and Rise

William Greaves' 1968 meta-movie freakout gets its day

FILM | "Symbiopsychotaxiplasm: Take One" is a movie that's as mysterious as its name. Filmed on location in Central Park in 1968, director William Greaves conducted an experiment that blended reality with artifice to create a wonderful head-scratcher.

"The film is a puzzle," Greaves said by phone from his New York City office, citing Luigi Pirandello's 1921 play "Six Characters in Search of an Author" as an influence.

A series of actors recite wooden lines that confront themes like abortion and homosexuality, and Greaves plays a bumbling director whose ineptitude ticks off his coworkers and causes them to question his competence.

A film crew captures the actors while another set of cameras captures the behind-the-scenes action, and Greaves blends the documentary footage and acted scenes into 70 minutes of line-blurring reality-drama. The spacey-funky Miles Davis soundtrack underscores the role of improvisation in Greaves' creative process.

The movie presages "reality"

NEW WAVE: Greaves' use of improvisation, documentary style, controversial themes and meta-text was groundbreaking.

TV, fake docudramas like "The Blair Witch Project" and such film-about-film flicks as "Living in Oblivion," but it was too far ahead of its time in 1968.

"I thought the film was going to be a rave at the Cannes Film Festival — that's how misguided I was," Greaves laughed. The long-time Actors Studio member shelved the project soon after it was completed and went on to a successful career in independent film and TV production.

A 1991 retrospective of Greaves' work at the Brooklyn Museum and a screening at the Robert Flaherty Film Seminar revived interest in "Symbiopsychotaxiplasm: Take One," and actors like Anthony Quinn and Steve Buscemi and director Steven Soderbergh praised the movie. "Steve Buscemi saw it at Sundance," Greaves said, "and he and I became very good friends. Meanwhile, Soderbergh became interested in the film and became supportive of my work. He helped me make 'Symbiopsychotaxiplasm: Take Two ½' [which features Buscemi], and Soderbergh paid for the full restoration of ['Take One']."

The AFI will show the restored film (in all its hippie-colored glory) as part of its Black History Month celebrations. CHRISTOPHER PORTER

There's Edie Sedgwick, celebrity, and "Edie Sedgwick," scourge of celebrity.

Edie Sedgwick: Not the Real Thing

Local transgendered starlet Edie Sedgwick isn't the late Warhol Factory superstar — she's not even a credible simulation. Our Sedgwick is a gimlet-eyed observer of celebrity culture who writes and performs songs about stars using only an iPod and her caustic take on Julia Roberts, Michael J. Fox, Sigourney Weaver and Robert Downey Jr. Being sent up in one of Sedgwick's brilliantly elliptical and utterly danceable electro-nutso performances is a strong argument in favor of becoming famous.

A Nice Girl Grows Up

Bryce Dallas Howard in the controversial indie film 'Manderlay'

CONTROVERSY | There is a stark sex scene in Lars von Trier's new drama, "Manderlay," in which pale-skinned actress Bryce Howard appears with African actor Issaach De Bankole.

The act is intentionally shocking and ambiguous. Like so much of the Danish director's work, the viewer's response to it reveals more about the viewer than the storyteller.

Howard, the daughter of director Ron Howard, sees the scene as a cathartic moment for her character. "It isn't necessarily about the act," she said, "it is more about her unleashing herself."

For this rising star, exposing herself on film is a way to unleash her creative energy. So how did this nice girl end up doing a provocative scene in an art film? "I really wanted to work with Lars," she said.

Her first exposure to the maverick writer-director was his 1996 drama "Breaking the Waves." "I watched it 18 to 20 times," she said. Howard also watched von Trier's

"Dogville" again and again.

"Manderlay," the second film in von Trier's trilogy about America, picks up where "Dogville" left off.

In 1933, the naively virtuous Grace arrives at a remote Alabama plantation that didn't get word slavery ended.

Grace takes it upon herself to turn the tables on the masters. Having instituted democracy at Manderlay, she decides to stay until she has seen the residents through their first harvest. She soon realizes that you can't foist democracy on a society and expect everything to run smoothly.

As in "Dogville," which starred Nicole Kidman, everything in this film takes place in a large, nearly bare space with locations mapped by words painted on the floor.

Von Trier wrote the sequel with Kidman in mind, but she said no. Howard impressed the writer-director with a certain impetuous quality. As for the actress, she saw "Manderlay" as an opportunity to take a meaty role with a director whom she admired. Her father encouraged her to take the part.

Someday she would like to star in one of her father's films (she has had cameos in some). In the meantime, she plans to work steadily on her own. ANGELA DAWSON (VNU ENTERTAINMENT NEWS WIRE)

UNEASY RELATIONS: Jasper's enigmatic grandfather is the novel's starting point.

An Author Goes Home

Kenji Jasper set out to demystify his family and found himself

PAGES | After three novels featuring conflicted urban dwellers, Kenji Jasper's latest work tackles a more intimate topic — his own family. The D.C. native appears Friday at Politics & Prose to discuss "The House on Childress Street."

The gracefully penned memoir includes poignant revelations on a drug-addicted uncle and plenty of Jasper's own soul-searching, but centers on his late grandfather, Jesse James Langley Sr., an enigmatic man who dubbed himself "The Lone Ranger." Jasper's eloquent prose reveals him as stoic and distant, but a loving father and provider.

Though not searching to expose the family, Jasper didn't know what skeletons he might unearth at the project's outset. Knowledge of his extended family was murky — his grandfather's tendency to dine alone at holiday gatherings was among many perplexing inclinations. "I was fortunate that nothing bone-chilling came out of it," said Jasper.

A contributor to the "D.C. Noir" crime fiction collection and veteran NPR commentator, Jasper was surprised at his grandfather's lack of background awareness. "He had essentially grown up without any real female nurturing ... It helped me to understand so much about who he was as a person and why he had difficulty expressing a lot of the emotions that he did later on in life."

With three books set in the nation's capital, the current Brooklyn resident admits to frequent homesickness for the District, where much of his family still resides. When asked if he'll return south, his voice echoed with certainty. "You can say I'll definitely be a D.C. resident again before it's all over." CRAIG SMITH

The Race Is On

Comic Paul Mooney has one subject, but his material is endless

COMEDY | Paul Mooney doesn't push boundaries, because Paul Mooney has no boundaries. Taste? Oh, no. Propriety? Definitely not. Comfort? "I say nigga a hundred times every morning. It makes my teeth white." White folks, says Mooney, shouldn't have made up the n-word if they didn't want him to use it.

And use it he does. Paul Mooney mines one vein: race. That's it. So if you're an audience member of largely European descent, you have two options: Squirm like a lobster over the boiling pot or laugh uncontrollably along with the darker-complected folks in the room. (It's a comedy show; you are allowed to laugh.)

To the hipster set, Mooney is probably best known from Comedy Central's "Chappelle's Show." In the first season's "Ask a Black Dude" segments, Mooney played a cranky oracle of negritude. An inane question from a certain famous horror author inspires the response, "I wrote a script for Stephen King. It's called 'Nigga With a Brain.' We'll see how that scares people."

In season two, he played — yes — a cranky oracle of negritude, Negrodamus. ("Negrodamus,

OBSERVATIONAL: Let's just say that Mooney won't be talking about airplane food.

why do white people like Wayne Brady so much?" Mooney: "White people like Wayne Brady because he makes Bryant Gumbel look like Malcolm X."

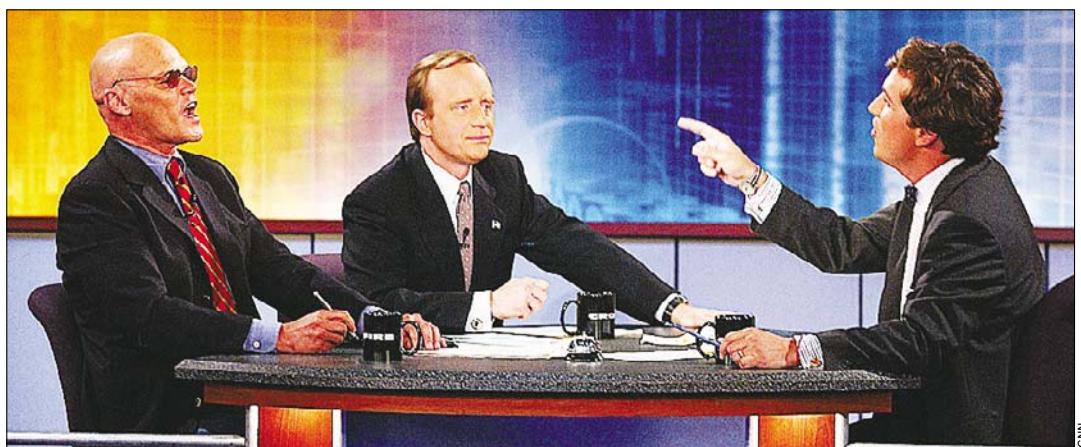

Mooney's scathing riffs began before Dave Chappelle was born. In 1972, he landed a job writing for the classic Redd Foxx sitcom, "Sanford and Son." He co-wrote many of Richard Pryor's most famous routines. Then in 1990 he created the character Homey the Clown for the Fox comedy show "In Living Color" — the show that launched the Wayans Brothers, Jamie Foxx, Jennifer Lopez (as a dancer) and that white guy, Jim Carrey.

So when Mooney imagines whites as slaves — "Oh, I just can't go on, I'll get a sunburn; call my lawyer ... we're not picking this [cotton]" — it rings just true enough to get a laugh. And false enough to defang every other stereotype the human race — or Mooney — may deploy. BOB MASSEY

Bo Knows Rock

And blues and R&B, but this almost Idol plays it too safe

MUSIC | An "American Idol" Southern-boy runner-up, beloved by hordes of shrieking fangirlies, cleans up good for his big-time debut.

Clay Aiken? Heavens, no. The new look of near-idolom has long hair, soulful eyes and the gritty, undefeated integrity of a roadhouse journeyman. Make way for Bo Bice.

The season five also-ran, who lost to perky country-bot Carrie Underwood, comes to Nation for the 99.5-sponsored Mess Fess Sunday night. The evening is a pop symposium of sorts also featuring skinny-suited new wave boy band the Click Five. Bice's considerable stage presence should be in evidence — his beefy, earnest charm and penchant for dragging the microphone stand all over the stage in a manner less aggressive than lovelorn.

Which may make up for the songs he'll be singing which, if his album "The Real Thing" (ha!) is any indication, are blues-deficient, soul-free, semi-generic rock with enough vocal urgency on Bice's part — he has an old-fashioned way of emoting powerfully, without using melisma or sounding as if he's about to bust his spleen — to carry conviction.

And it's too bad, because the boy has personality plus, as he demonstrated on the show. Since he was used to being an anomaly on "Idol," he should have known better than to allow fear to turn him into the dime-a-dozen, people-pleasing singer he would have become if he had actually won the competition. ARION BERGER (EXPRESS)

RISKING IT ALL IN THE NAME OF LOVE: In "Fair Ladies at a Game of Poem Cards," two couples gamble with their very lives. There's poetic dialogue, undying love, the world of the samurai and it's all a very chancy game of chance. The mystical play is a Rorschach Theatre production and is being performed at Casa del Pueblo; it closes this weekend.

LIVE ZYDECO | THE SOUTH WILL RISE AGAIN

BUCK'S GANG: Zydeco's been around since the '20s, but the Cajun-R&B hybrid didn't catch on nationally until the '80s. Virtuoso Buckwheat Zydeco and his band were in the vanguard, becoming the first zydeco artists to sign to a major label and remaining the style's most famous performers for the next two decades. Buckwheat's irresistible danceable fusion of Zydeco and rock comes to Strathmore Sunday as part of a tour in support of his new record, "Jackpot."

CHARLIE PALMER STEAK, which sits at the foot of Capitol Hill, prides itself on its wide array of American wines. Last month, the restaurant's sommelier, Nadine Brown, started a 50-week alphabetical tour of wines from the nation's 50 states as part of a special "Wine Wednesdays" promotion. It started with Alabama; a Wyoming wine will be offered toward the end of the year. Have you ever been curious what wine from Connecticut is like? The Nutmeg State's turn is coming next week. The wines are available by the glass or bottle. And as always, there are many other kinds of wine available in Charlie Palmer's wine cube, which holds 3,500 bottles.

Meredith Monk & Vocal Ensemble The Impermanence Project

Saturday, February 25 at 8 pm

After leading a workshop in a London hospice, Monk created The Impermanence Project. Following a recent performance at Carnegie Hall, The New York Times praised her ensemble as "talented and beautifully prepared," her music possessed of "elegance... Her use of harmony soothes," and her work as containing "a gentleness that prodded the imagination."

Funded in part by the National Dance Project of the New England Foundation for the Arts, with lead funding from the National Endowment for the Arts and Doris Duke Charitable Foundation. Additional funding provided by The Andrew W. Mellon Foundation and The Ford Foundation.

Susan Marshall & Company Return to Intimacy

Saturday, March 4 at 8 pm

Hailed by The New York Times as "one of the most significant choreographers today," this MacArthur Genius Award-winner is an original, powerful, and influential artist. To celebrate her 20th year with Dance Theater Workshop, Marshall premieres a series of smaller pieces along with performances of some of her trademark works, incorporating film and multimedia elements.

LIVE ONLINE*Ask Tom

My parents are coming to town next weekend and are planning to have dinner at Four Sisters (Huong Que) in Falls Church. My dad has been asking to try Vietnamese food for quite some time, but I'm afraid I don't know what dishes to suggest. I am wondering if there are any house specialties or items the kitchen does particularly well.

Ask for Le Lai, one of the four beautiful sisters. She can point out a few of the restaurant's many fine dishes. They include spring rolls, baby clams with chopped pork, grilled beef, snow peas and asparagus with garlic, squid with sour cabbage.

→ 6769 Wilson Blvd., Falls Church; 703-538-6717.

I want to highly recommend the To Go section of Petits Plats in Woodley Park. We took out the rotisserie chicken along with some sides from there last night and it was so delicious. The guy running the place was so nice, too, but I noticed they weren't getting a lot of business and I do not want this neighborhood place to disappear!

Petits Plats has a to-go option? That's news to moi.

for French food that's reasonably priced. I'm debating between Lavandou and Petits Plats. Which would you suggest? And, if not those two, then?

Lavandou would be my choice there, and I'd suggest you also look into reservations at Montmartre on Capitol Hill and Bistro Lepic in Georgetown.

Riding High at Metro Moto Expo

→ IN THE ANNALS of "Who knew? Mid-Atlantic Division," this may take the cake: The Northeast Motorcycle Expo happens right here in the Metro area — well, in Fredericksburg, Va. Granted, this is the first of such gatherings, but it'll be cherry. Expect "super-builders" including Cory Ness, above, Alan Lee and Eric Gorges; stunt riding; live music and kids' entertainment. And, of course, hundreds of new bikes, bike accessories and — va-va-vroom — fashions. Fredericksburg Expo Center, Fredericksburg, Va.; Sat. & Sun., 10 a.m.-5 p.m., $15 adults, $7 children ages 6-12; 877-245-3976, www.NEMotorcycleExpo.com. WHAT DO YOU WANNA DO TONIGHT? BY FRITZ HAHN, RHOME ANDERSON AND DAVID MALITZ

THURSDAY

We're looking forward to the debut of Thursday Night Trivia at FOODBARDC. If the questions on the Web site are anything to go by, this is our kind of arcane trivia night: Which war ended in 1856 with the signing of the Treaty of Paris? Three rounds of trivia begin at 8 p.m. There's a $4 entry fee for each team of 2 to 4 players, but winners receive cash, bar tabs and other prizes.

FRIDAY

If you didn't get enough warmth in your heart this week, reprise the sentiments tonight at CONSTITUTION HALL with two acts who have penned some of the best hip-hop and R&B love songs of the past five years. If you think ditties like R. Kelly's "Sex in the Kitchen" fit that category, you're required to listen to Floetry and Common's duet "Superstar."

Take a titan of the dance music world and strip away the trappings of the massive nightclubs that are often the only places where you can hear hallowed bosses of the turntables: No drunken fools mashing your feet and busting your groove on the floor; no egregious cover charge and chain-gang line outside; no requirement to wear fancy clothing. House music legend Tony Humphries plays D.C. SANCTUARY.

SATURDAY

Join U Street's artsy set for Asheru's "Guerilla Lounge" at CAFE NEMA tonight. The driven rapper, community activist and school teacher is featured in a new book that chronicles the lives of African Americans with unconventional careers. He'll be performing with other Washington artists featured in "Beat of a Different Drum" including W. Ellington Felton and spoken-word poet Kymone Freeman.

Why is there a crowd in front of the restaurant HERITAGE INDIA? Because on certain days it transforms into HERITAGE LOUNGE. Tonight the folks from Euronet turn the room into a Brazilian Carnival-style party with a DJ, samba dancers and Caipirinha drink specials. Expect crowds of twenty- to forty-some things to get their groove on. We hear there will even be Mardi Gras beads. Doors open at 10:30 p.m.; the cover is $15 in advance from GO CHUCK GO! D.C. Go-Go hero Chuck Brown takes the pearly whites to Zanzibar.

SUNDAY

Another holiday weekend is upon us, so take advantage by going out and doing something different. Both CRYSTAL CITY SPORTS PUB and ARLINGTON CINEMA N' DRAFTHOUSE host viewing parties for the Daytona 500. We're curious how the fender benders are going to look on the latter's 25-foot digital movie screen, and how loud the engines will sound on a full theater surround system. It all kicks off at 1:30 p.m.

What would a long weekend be without an appearance by the Godfather of Go-Go? Chuck Brown joins the Uncalled 4 Band and the Afterhours Band at ZANZIBAR for a night of celebratory booty shaking. The music begins at 10 p.m., but show up early to watch the NBA All-Star game on televisions throughout the bar. Tickets are $20 from all Downtown Locker Room locations.

Wolds Collide at DC9 when DJ Bill Spieler of Liberation Dance Party takes over the decks at Taint, the club's monthly indie-rock dance party thrown by (and for) gay music lovers. Anyone is welcome at this always-packed affair; Admission is $3.

Back in 1996, Camp Lo unleashed one of the few styles that has stood as unbeatable. They combined a system of dense jargon with throwback '70s swagger and killer beats to create sleeper hits like "Luchini" and "Black Nostaljack." Even though they never broke the underground's glass ceiling, their biggest records are classics to a broad spectrum of hip-hop listeners. The Bronx boys with the impenetrable slang and wild fashion sense play at YUCA tonight along with a bill of locals anchored by DJ Jesse Tittsworth.
